The KEYMACRO keyboard macros allow you to automate keyboard presses. You can define the KEYMACRO command to be any action that is performed by the keyboard. When you press the assigned hotkey key, it automatically presses the defined keyboard macro. The keyboard macro can be any combination of keys, such as pressing any sequence of numbers, or combinations of numbers, letters and symbols, or even arbitrary text. There is one program that allows to use such macros: KEYMACRO. Any program can have its own macros defined. Macro can have any size. Keyboard macros are performed when a key is pressed, and key is released. keymacro_macros.txt ----- Select the program to use as the program to macro This program will run if a macro is run. Use 'dir' or 'dumpk' to check which programs were used. Change the other settings if necessary. When a macro is run, if it does not find a keyboard then nothing happens. Click OK to add the macro to the macro list. Macro can be used as a keyboard shortcut or shortcut. Macro can be used as a keyboard macro that inserts text at the selected line.
