Robotic mitral valve repair has become the new standard of care in mitral valve surgery because it offers many benefits to patients and surgeons, including a minimally invasive approach. This article describes a robot-assisted mitral valve repair technique with a novel system that is designed to maintain a close visual contact with the mitral valve and can also accurately track its movements. Intraoperative ultrasound (IOUS) navigation using the robot-assisted robotic system is described and its potential benefits in this operation are discussed. IOUS navigation using the robot-assisted robotic system allows for real-time visualization of the surgical field. Intraoperative ultrasound gives the surgeon the ability to adjust the position of the robot, and as a result, accurate cardiac motion can be tracked. IOUS-assisted robotic mitral valve repair is the first human in vivo application of this type of robot system in cardiac surgery. The advantages of the system include intraoperative visualization and real-time adjustment of the surgical instrument positioning by the surgeon.Q: Binary Search Tree to Stack I wrote a function to convert binary search tree to stack.
