Q: Why does keyboard shortcuts (alt-1,2,etc) not work in Xubuntu 18.10? I'm having issues where Alt+ is not registering, it seems to be the common issue. I'm trying to get my synapse to start with Alt+1 instead of Ctrl+1, but it's not registering. What can I do to fix it?

A: `sudo apt-get install xfce4-settings-plugin`

This might be able to fix it by itself, but it's worth a shot.

Q: how to clear the object from the xml file I want to clear the object from the xml file once i have created an instance of the object from the xml file here is the code

public string xmlFromPortal() { string layoutXml = string.Empty; if (string.IsNullOrEmpty(ProjectSearchTabTextBox.Text)) {

return string.Empty; } using (var rdr = AppXmlService.OpenInService(ProjectSearchTabTextBox.Text)) { //i am not sure what should i write here, //to clear the object to add the instance from the xml file

I have an express app with a static server like: In my app.js file, I would like to load img/myimage.png. Currently the code looks like:

var server = http.createServer(app); server.listen(app.get('port'), function () { console.log('Express server listening on port'+ app.get('port')); });

 And I have

express router: app.get('/myimage.png', function(req, res){ // code here is not executed }) Thank you for your help. A: Express's http.request() methods accept a couple extra options: // if the image url is var http = require('http'); var request =
  http.request({ hostname:
    'image.foo.com', path:
    'path/to/myimage.png', method: 'GET', headers: { 'user-agent': 'API-v1.3' } }); //
if the image is in a local filesystem path, //
ie. /home/user

irritants by a product manufacturer is sufficient to dispel the protection afforded by the warnings on the product's packaging. Id. at 823. Similarly, in Sears Roebuck and Co., this Court found that the warning accompanying the washing machine's packaging was adequate as to its contents, despite the absence of a specific instruction for the consumer not to use harsh detergents. 516 So.2d at 338. The warnings accompanying the washing machine's packaging were as follows: "Caution: When washing clothes in automatic washing machine, give full loads, not partial loads. Do not stand clothes inside of machine longer than recommended. Do not wash any dirty clothes in this washing machine." Id. This Court explained that "[a] consumer who read the warning in conjunction with the washing machine box would have no reason not to heed the warning, which is far more specific and specific to the area of potential danger than the warning in this case." Id. Similarly, the warnings on the packaging for the batteries in this case were as follows: Keep away from young children. Do not use in metal containers or where subject to heat or fire. Do not store in extreme temperatures, high or low. Do not expose batteries to water. Do not throw contents down drain or flush down toilet. Carefully follow all instructions on enclosed label. A drawing of the contents of the receptacle clearly identifies the batteries as the only contents, and, although the drawing is not the best of illustrations, a consumer would have no reason to conclude from the packaging that the batteries were intended for children or were not to be stored in metal containers. The warning accompanying the packaging of the battery was specific and sufficiently *397 conveyed to the consumer the dangers associated with the batteries. Moreover, unlike in Sears Roebuck and Co., the language used in the warning in this case was sufficient to impart to the consumer the dangers associated with the storage and use of the batteries. Thus, we find that a warning was provided to the consumer, and we cannot
