Note If you're a Linux user, check out Pixelmator (www.pixelmator.org). # BUYING PROFESSIONAL GRAPHICS AND VIDEO If you're a professional, you most likely need a professional graphics program. While not having a great deal of overlap between video and graphics editing, the two often go hand in hand. However, the overlap is fairly limited and is basically limited to the video effects (such as special effects) and color grading processes that are common to all video programs. For example, you can use Final Cut Pro to color grade your video, and after it's done, you can use Adobe After Effects to put the final touches on a commercial. You can access the resources in this section at www.howtogeek.com/category/video-editing/professional-graphics-video-editing-software. ## Budgeting for Graphic Software In determining what program to buy, you must first set a budget. Some programs, especially older ones, are almost an eternity to purchase and may require multiple purchases over the lifetime of your equipment. In addition, Photoshop itself now costs close to a grand, and many other programs are close behind it. Don't get caught up in what's "the cheapest," because the cheapest is usually the most expensive in the long run. That's because by the time you've purchased a program, gotten it installed and configured, and become comfortable with it,

To be able to achieve the same result as with Photoshop with Elements I needed to learn and understand the basic techniques. This tutorial will explain how to create the same type of images you saw in the blog post above using Photoshop and Photoshop Elements. We are going to use the Bristle Tips Brush and the Burn tool to get that result. Many bloggers are using the free software GIMP to edit their images. You can find tutorials for GIMP here If you want to see the process of how I created the image above you can watch this video: How to Light a Subject I like to light my subjects to get the most out of the natural light in my house. This increases the shadow contrast and creates the mood you want your images to have. With the background and the wall in front of me I can control the light coming in from different positions. The window gives light to the subject. To get the best result make sure that the subject is in the center of the window and that there is no background in between the window and the subject. So, move the subject to the part of the window that lets the most light in. The light in the background of the image will show up as a dark shadow. What you want to do is to light the background to get the shadow that you need to make the image more interesting. All you need to do is turn off the light on the main light source. The key to lighting is location, positioning, and angle. To get the shadow as dark as possible I use the bright of the wall in front of me that is in front of the window and I block the light with my hands. I try to block the light using a mirror. I use the Burn tool to darken the shadows. I use the Clone tool to darken the shadow on the left to the right. To get the light as bright as possible I use the Dodge tool and I move the light source close to the subject. Be careful with the brightness. Make sure that you do not light a subject too dark. How to Get a Glowy Effect A few weeks ago I started receiving emails on how to do the glowy effect on subjects. And of course I had to investigate if I could reproduce the glowy effect on my camera. The Glowy effect is achieved by using the Glow filter in Photoshop. You have to get this filter from the filters palette in 05a79cecff

Q: Return the result of a MySQL query as a JSON array I'm new to PHP and I'm trying to return a JSON array from a MySQL database. Is there any PHP function that can do this? From the database I have some data like this: Array ([0] => Array ([0] => 11756 [1] => 10 [2] => 8574)) And I want it to be converted to: Array ([0] => Array ([post_id] => 11756 [post_title] => title) [1] => Array ([post_id] => 10 [post_title] => title) [2] => Array ([post_id] => 8574 [post_title] => title)) A: Try to use this example : $row[$field], 'post_title'=>$row[$field]]; } } return json_encode($json); } $ID = "your ID"; $field="post_title"; $json=arrayFromMySqlData($ID,$field); //output echo $json;
