"Politicians pretend to be the voice of the people but really represent the powerful few," said Republican Senate candidate Greg Gianforte, according to the Helena Independent Record. Ad Policy In Montana, candidates for federal office spend considerable time debating whether to run. But what about the elected officials who oversee the states where federal races take place? Here in Montana, candidates for Montana House and Senate elections debated whether the state needed a balanced budget during the last legislative session, which ended in June and included a $220 million pay raise for state legislators, but not for the governor. Why not for them? "There's nobody that's speaking for the people," said one Republican candidate for the state House.

Ronnie Carroll, 67, of Brandon, Mississippi, was found at about 1:45 p.m. on Friday by family members who go out fishing with him every Saturday, according to Southaven police. The cause of death was reported to be a self-inflicted gunshot wound, but toxicology tests are pending, police said. His wife, Darlene Carroll, said the last time she had spoken to him was Friday, when he left their home. She said she was concerned that he didn't come home Friday night. "He makes a lot of calls, maybe seven to 10. He said he would probably call again in the morning," said Darlene Carroll. "He did have a thing to tell me that night." She said she didn't have a specific reason for concern Friday. "I just kind of automatically went into concern mode," she said. "I didn't think he was in any kind of trouble." At about 4:30 p.m. Friday, Carroll called his sister, Carol Adams of Jackson, who said her brother told her he was going to be missing from work for a week and needed to get some things done before he left for good. "We talked. He told me to 'hope everything's okay,' but I wasn't totally sure that's what he meant," said Adams. "I didn't press him for any 6d1f23a050
